This is how the Latinx community claps back.

MYTH 1
There will be no citizenship question on the 2020 census.

Section 1, article 2 states that there should be a mandated count of every single person in the United States every 10 years. Adding a citizenship question on the census would be unconstitutional. There will be no citizenship question on the 2020 census. It is your constitutional right, regardless of status.

MYTH 2
The census bureau must protect your information.

Your privacy and data you share will be protected under Title 13. It would be illegal for the census bureau to share/reveal any information that would identify you or your household. The census uses the data collected to produce studies and analyze trends that could help us create better laws and see what the Latinx population looks like up to date.

Enumerators only show up at your door if you haven't participated.

Enumerators from the census bureau will start knocking on doors from May-July 2020 ONLY if you haven't filled out the census. If you don't want people knocking on your door, make sure to fill out the census ASAP via internet, mail, or phone. Every household should receive an invitation via mail by April 1, 2020 with instructions on how to participate.
